Proposed Amendment — Communal Organizations

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 16, 1999: Communal organizations

(11) That section 143 of the Act be modified in accordance with proposals, governing the taxation of communal organizations, described in the budget documents tabled by the Minister of Finance in the House of Commons on February 16, 1999.

Federal budget, supplementary information, February 16, 1999: Communal organizations

Hutterite colonies carry on farming and other related businesses in Western Canada as "communal organizations" and as such are governed by the rules in section 143 of the Income Tax Act. In these communal organizations, the members of a religious congregation live and work together, none of the members owns property in his or her own right, and the members are required to devote their working lives to the activities of the congregation. The congregation as a whole owns property and typically operates one or more businesses.

Allocation of income by communal organizations

The purpose of section 143 is to provide a level of taxation for communal organizations that is roughly comparable to the general tax treatment of other families in the farming community. Each communal organization is treated for tax purposes as an inter vivos trust and may elect each year to make a deemed distribution of its income to its members, in whose hands the distribution is taxed. This allows for the taxation of the distribution at the income tax rates of the members, rather than at the top personal tax rate applied to the trust. In computing the income of the trust, no deduction may be made in respect of salaries, wages or other benefits paid to members of the congregation.

Under the election, 80 per cent of a congregation's income is divided by the number of adult members of the congregation. In the case of an unmarried adult, this quotient is the adult's mandatory share of the congregation's income. In each case where there are two married adults in a family, twice the amount of the quotient is allocated to the adult spouse designated by the congregation. The remaining 20 per cent of the congregation's income must be allocated to unmarried adults and designated spouses, but the congregation has the discretion to divide this remainder among these individuals in unequal shares. Each of these individuals may claim a basic personal credit and such other credits as may be available (including a married credit). Once the standard schedule of tax rates is applied, any resulting tax liability is paid by the congregation on behalf of these individuals.

The allocation of income required for communal organizations has remained largely unchanged since it was introduced in the mid-1970s. Since that time, however, provisions of the Income Tax Act have changed to permit the deductibility of wages and salaries paid to employed spouses, provided that the amounts are reasonable in the circumstances. In a typical communal organization, spouses contribute to income-generating farming activities. Therefore, to maintain a roughly equivalent level of taxation between communal organizations and other farming operations, the budget proposes to amend section 143 to allow allocations of income to both spouses in a family. Under the amendment:

- one designated spouse in each family will be allocated one full share of income;
- each non-designated spouse will be allocated a one-half share; and
- each unmarried adult will also be allocated a full share of income.

Example

A colony consists of 20 married couples, 10 single adults and has $900,000 in income. At present, 80 per cent of income is allocated in 50 equal pro-rata shares (two to each designated adult in each of the married couples, and one to each single adult). Each mandatory share is $14,400 (i.e., .8×900,000/50). Accordingly, each designated spouse is allocated $28,800 of income, and each unmarried adult is allocated $14,400. Each adult to whom any of the pro-rata shares has been allocated may claim a basic personal credit, and each designated married adult may also claim a married credit. The remaining 20 per cent of income is allocated in the proportions chosen by the colony among these 30 adults.

Under the proposed amendment, there would be one "full share" allocated to each of the 20 designated adults and 10 unmarried adults, and one "half share" allocated to each of the 20 non-designated spouses. As there are the equivalent of 40 "full shares," each mandatory full share is $18,000 (i.e., .8×900,000/40), and each half share is $9,000. Accordingly, each designated spouse and single adult is allocated $18,000 of income, and each non- designated spouse is allocated $9,000. The remaining 20 per cent of income is allocated as the colony chooses among the 50 adults. Each adult may claim a basic personal credit and, if the income of the non-designated spouse is sufficiently low, the designated spouse may claim the married credit in respect of the non-designated spouse.

It is proposed that this measure apply to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years.

Technical changes affecting communal organizations

Late filing of election

As described above, a communal organization is treated as a trust for income tax purposes. The income tax return of a trust is due 90 days after the end of a calendar year. The election to allocate income to congregation members is due at the same time.

For the 1998 and subsequent taxation years, it is proposed to add this election to the list of elections for which the filing deadline may be extended pursuant to the fairness rules under section 220 of the Income Tax Act.

Business investments with third parties

In some cases, a communal organization may have the effective management or control of a corporation in which other investors have a significant minority interest. The existing rules provide, in this case, that all of the income of the corporation is deemed to be the organization's income.

In order to increase the flexibility of business structures, it is proposed to allocate a corporation's income for a taxation year to a communal organization only where all of the issued shares of the corporation are owned throughout the year by the organization. In all other cases, the ordinary rules for computing corporate tax payable apply. This proposal applies in respect of corporate taxation years that begin after February 1999.

Pre-RSC History: Para. 143(2)(a) amended by 1988, c. 55, s. 128, to substitute "and satisfaction or personal needs of its members," for "and satisfaction of the personal needs of its members, and if no deductions were made under sections 110.1, and 110.2,", applicable to 1988 et seq.

(b) all tax, interest and penalties, if any, payable under this Part by adult members designated in accordance with subsection (2) have been paid within the time required by this Act; and

(c) no amounts are, by virtue of subsection 110(2), deducted in computing the taxable income for the year of the members designated in accordance with subsection (2).

(a) the trust shall be deemed not to have made the gift; and

(b) each adult member of a family to whom an amount is deemed under subsection (2) to be payable in the year shall be deemed to have made, in the year, such a gift the fair market value of which is the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the fair market value of the gift made by the trust,

B is the amount deemed under subsection (2) to be payable in the year in respect of the trust to the adult member, and

C is the total of all amounts deemed under subsection (2) to be payable in the year in respect of the trust to an adult member of a family.

(ii) as a consequence of the death of the taxpayer,

(iii) in respect of an amount not included in the expenditure, determined without reference to subparagraph (6)(b)(ii), or

(iv) because of an excluded obligation (as defined in subsection 6202.1(5) of the Income Tax Regulations) in relation to a share issued to the taxpayer or, where the expenditure is the cost of an interest in a partnership, to the partnership.

(4) Amount or benefit — For the purposes of subsections (2) and (3), where the amount or benefit to which a taxpayer is entitled at any time is provided by way of an agreement or other arrangement under which the taxpayer has a right, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently (otherwise than as a consequence of the death of the taxpayer), to acquire property, for greater certainty the amount or benefit to which the taxpayer is entitled under the agreement or arrangement is considered to be not less than the fair market value of the property at that time.

(5) Amount or benefit — For the purposes of subsections (2) and (3), where the amount or benefit to which a taxpayer is entitled at any time is provided by way of a guarantee, security or similar indemnity or covenant in respect of any loan or other obligation of the taxpayer, for greater certainty the amount or benefit to which the taxpayer is entitled under the guarantee or indemnity at any particular time is considered to be not less than the total of the unpaid amount of the loan or obligation at that time and all other amounts outstanding in respect of the loan or obligation at that time.

(6) Amount of expenditure — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the amount of any expenditure that is, or is the cost or capital cost of, a taxpayer's tax shelter investment, and the amount of any expenditure of a taxpayer an interest in which is a tax shelter investment, shall be reduced to the amount, if any, by which

(a) the amount of the taxpayer's expenditure otherwise determined

exceeds

(b) the total of

(i) the limited-recourse amounts of

(A) the taxpayer, and

(B) all other taxpayers not dealing at arm's length with the taxpayer that can reasonably be considered to relate to the expenditure,

(ii) the taxpayer's at-risk adjustment in respect of the expenditure, and

(iii) each limited-recourse amount and at-risk adjustment, determined under this section when this section is applied to each other taxpayer who deals at arm's length with and holds, directly or indirectly, an interest in the taxpayer, that can reasonably be considered to relate to the expenditure.

(b) interest is payable at least annually, at a rate equal to or greater than the lesser of

(i) the prescribed rate of interest in effect at the time the indebtedness arose, and

(9) Timing — Where at any time a taxpayer has paid an amount (in this subsection referred to as the "repaid amount") on account of the principal amount of an indebtedness that was, before that time, the unpaid principal amount of a loan or any other form of indebtedness to which subsection (2) applies (in this subsection referred to as the "former amount or benefit") relating to an expenditure of the taxpayer,

(a) the former amount or benefit is considered to have been an amount or benefit under subsection (2) in respect of the taxpayer at all times before that time; and

(b) the expenditure is, subject to subsection (6), deemed to have been made or incurred at that time to the extent of, and by the payment of, the repaid amount.

(10) Timing — Where at any time a taxpayer has paid an amount (in this subsection referred to as the "repaid amount") on account of the principal amount of an indebtedness which was, before that time, an unpaid principal amount that was a limited-recourse amount (in this subsection referred to as the "former limited-recourse indebtedness") relating to an expenditure of the taxpayer,

(a) the former limited-recourse indebtedness is considered to have been a limited-recourse amount at all times before that time; and

(b) the expenditure is, subject to subsection (6), deemed to have been made or incurred at that time to the extent of, and by the amount of, the repaid amount.

Related Provisions: 231.6 — Foreign-based information.

(11) Short-term debt — Where a taxpayer pays all of the principal of an indebtedness no later than 60 days after that indebtedness arose and the indebtedness would otherwise be considered to be a limited-recourse amount solely because of the application of subsection (7) or (8), that subsection does not apply to the indebtedness unless

(a) any portion of the repayment is made with a limited-recourse amount; or

(b) the repayment can reasonably be considered to be part of a series of loans or other indebtedness and repayments that ends more than 60 days after the indebtedness arose.

Related Provisions: 231.6 — Foreign-based information; 251(1) — Arm's length.

(12) Series of loans or repayments — For the purpose of paragraph (7)(a), a debtor is considered not to have made arrangements to repay an indebtedness within 10 years where the debtor's arrangement to repay can reasonably be considered to be part of a series of loans or other indebtedness and repayments that ends more than 10 years after it begins.

(13) Information located outside Canada — For the purpose of this section, where it can reasonably be considered that information relating to indebtedness that relates to a taxpayer's expenditure is available outside Canada and the Minister is not satisfied that the unpaid principal of the indebtedness is not a limited-recourse amount, the unpaid principal of the indebtedness relating to the taxpayer's expenditure is deemed to be a limited-recourse amount relating to the expenditure unless

(a) the information is provided to the Minister; or

(b) the information is located in a country with which the Government of Canada has entered into a tax convention or agreement that has the force of law in Canada and includes a provision under which the Minister can obtain the information.

(14) Information located outside Canada — For the purpose of this section, where it can reasonably be considered that information relating to whether a taxpayer is not dealing at arm's length with another taxpayer is available outside Canada and the Minister is not satisfied that the taxpayer is dealing at arm's length with the other taxpayer, the taxpayer and the other taxpayer are deemed not to be dealing with each other at arm's length unless

(a) the information is provided to the Minister; or

(b) the information is located in a country with which the Government of Canada has entered into a tax convention or agreement that has the force of law in Canada and includes a provision under which the Minister can obtain the information.

Proposed Amendment — 146(1)"refund of premiums"(b) — RRSP Rollover to Child or Grandchild on Death

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 16, 1999: RRSP/RRIF proceeds on death

(13) That the rules applying on the death of an annuitant under a registered retirement savings plan (RRSP) or registered retirement income fund (RRIF)

(a) be modified for deaths that occur after 1998, by providing in all cases that an amount included in the annuitant's income on death in respect of an RRSP or RRIF be offset to the extent of the amount distributed from the RRSP or RRIF to a financially dependent child or grandchild of the annuitant, and

(b) be similarly modified for deaths that occurred after 1995 and before 1999, where the annuitant's estate and the recipient of the distribution so elect.

Federal budget, supplementary information, February 16, 1999: RRSP/RRIF proceeds on death

When an annuitant under a registered retirement savings plan (RRSP) or registered retirement income fund (RRIF) dies, the existing income tax rules generally provide that the value of the RRSP or RRIF is included in computing the deceased's income for the year of death. However, if the deceased has a surviving spouse, this income inclusion is offset by RRSP or RRIF distributions made after death to the surviving spouse. If there is no surviving spouse, the same offset is available in connection with distributions made to the deceased's financially dependent children or grandchildren. In both cases, these distributions are included in the income of the recipients, but a number of different mechanisms generally allow spouses and minor or infirm children to defer the taxation on these distributions. The deferral mechanisms involve transfers to acquire annuities, RRSPs and RRIFs for surviving spouses and infirm children, as well as transfers to acquire short-term annuities for minor children.

As noted above, the relief for the deceased's estate resulting from RRSP and RRIF distributions being made to financially dependent children and grandchildren is restricted to cases where there is no surviving spouse. The budget proposes to remove this restriction. This measure responds to cases of deaths of individuals with surviving spouses, where the deceased individuals' RRSPs are left to their dependent children. In these cases, the measure generally allows any resulting income inclusions to be borne by the dependent children rather than the estates of the deceased individuals.

The measure is proposed to apply in connection with deaths that occurred after 1998. It is also proposed to apply this measure in connection with deaths that occurred after 1995, but only when the deceased's estate and the recipient of an RRSP or RRIF distribution so elect. If the distribution in question was made before 1999 and the recipient was entitled to defer the taxation on the distribution by making a transfer under one of the deferral mechanisms described above, a transitional measure will allow the transfer to be made before March 2000. In these circumstances, the amount of the transfer will be available to offset the recipient's income for the taxation year in which the related RRSP or RRIF distribution was received. The deadline for a transfer in respect of an RRSP or RRIF distribution made after 1998 will remain the 60th day following the taxation year in which the distribution is made.

and for the purpose of paragraph (b), it is assumed, unless the contrary is established, that a dependant was not financially dependent on the annuitant for support at the time of the annuitant's death if the dependant's income for the year preceding the taxation year in which the annuitant died exceeded the total of $500 and the amount used under paragraph (c) of the description of B in subsection 118(1) for that preceding year;

(13.1) RRSP advantages — Where an issuer of a registered retirement savings plan or any person not dealing at arm's length with the issuer has extended an advantage to the annuitant of the plan (or to a person not dealing at arm's length with the annuitant) and that advantage would have been prohibited if the plan had met the requirement for registration contained in paragraph (2)(c.4),

(13.2) Maturity after age 69 — For the purpose of subsection (12), where a retirement savings plan accepted for registration before 1997 does not mature by the end of the particular year in which the annuitant under the plan attains 69 years of age,

(a) the plan is deemed to have been amended immediately after the particular year; and

(b) the plan as amended is deemed not to comply with the requirements of this section for its acceptance by the Minister for registration for the purposes of this Act.

History: Subsecs. 146(13.2) added by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 41(4), applicable after 1996, except that

(a) it does not apply to a retirement savings plan where the annuitant under the plan attained 70 years of age before 1997;

(b) in applying the subsec. to a retirement savings plan where the annuitant under the plan attained 69 years of age in 1996, the references in that provisions to "69 years of age" shall be read as "70 years of age";

(c) it does not apply to a retirement savings plan where an annuity contract was issued before March 6, 1996 under, pursuant to or as the plan to provide the retirement income under the plan and, under the terms and conditions of the contract as they read immediately before that day,

(i) the day on which annuity payments are to begin under the plan is fixed and determined and is after the year in which the annuitant attains

(A) 69 years of age, where the annuitant had not attained that age before 1997, or

(B) 70 years of age, where the annuitant attained 69 years of age in 1996, and

(ii) the amount and timing of each annuity payment are fixed and determined; and

(d) it does not apply to a retirement savings plan that is part of a life insurance policy that was issued before March 6, 1996 and that has a life insurance component that is not a retirement savings plan where, under the terms and conditions of the policy as they read immediately before that day,

(i) the amount of each premium, if any, subsequently payable in respect of the life insurance component of the policy, and a date by which each such premium is to be paid, are fixed and determined,

(ii) the amount payable under the policy because of the death of the annuitant (determined without reference to any amount payable as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, a policy dividend or related interest) is fixed and determined, and

(A) 69 years of age, where the annuitant had not attained that age before 1997, or

(B) 70 years of age, where the annuitant attained 69 years of age in 1996.

Where, because of (d) above, the subsec. does not apply to a retirement savings plan that is part of a life insurance policy, any part of a premium paid under the policy after March 5, 1996 that was not fixed and determined under the terms and conditions of the policy as they read at the end of that day is deemed, for the purposes of subsecs. 146(5), (5.1) and (8.2), not to have been paid under the policy.

(13.3) Notice — Where a retirement savings plan accepted for registration before 1997 does not prevent maturity after the particular year in which the annuitant under the plan attains 69 years of age, the issuer of the plan shall, before July of the particular year, notify the annuitant in writing that, pursuant to subsections (12) and (13.2), the plan will cease to be a registered retirement savings plan if it does not mature by the end of the particular year, except that no such notification is required where, before that month,

(a) the plan has matured; or

(b) arrangements have been made for the plan to mature, or for the property under the plan to be transferred or otherwise paid out of the plan, by the end of the particular year.

Related Provisions: 162(7) — Penalty for failure to comply.

(14) Premiums paid in taxation year — Where any amount has been paid in a taxation year as a premium under a retirement savings plan that was, at the end of that taxation year, a registered retirement savings plan, the amount so paid shall be deemed, for the purposes of this Act, to have been paid in that year as a premium under a registered retirement savings plan.

Related Provisions: 146(1) — "Retirement savings plan".

(15) Plan not registered at end of year entered into — Notwithstanding anything in this section, where an amount is received in a taxation year as a benefit under a registered retirement savings plan that was not, at the end of the year in which the plan was entered into, a registered retirement savings plan, such part, if any, of the amount so received as may be prescribed shall be deemed, for the purposes of this Act, to have been received in the taxation year otherwise than as a benefit or other payment under a registered retirement savings plan.

(a) to a registered pension plan for the benefit of the transferor or to a registered retirement savings plan or registered retirement income fund under which the transferor is the annuitant, or

(b) to a registered retirement savings plan or registered retirement income fund under which the spouse or former spouse of the transferor is the annuitant, where the transferor and the transferor's spouse or former spouse are living separate and apart and the payment or transfer is made under a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal, or under a written separation agreement, relating to a division of property between the transferor and the transferor's spouse or former spouse in settlement of rights arising out of, or on the breakdown of, their marriage, and, where there has been such a payment or transfer of such property on behalf of the transferor before the maturity of the plan,

(c) the amount of the payment or transfer shall not, solely because of the payment or transfer, be included in computing the income of the transferor or the transferor's spouse or former spouse,

(d) no deduction may be made under subsection (5), (5.1) or (8.2) or section 8 or 60 in respect of the payment or transfer in computing the income of any taxpayer, and

(e) where the payment or transfer was made to a registered retirement savings plan, for the purposes of subsection (8.2), the amount of the payment or transfer shall be deemed not to be a premium paid to that plan by the taxpayer.

Proposed Amendment — Internet Filing

Revenue Canada news release, June 15, 1999: Internet filing pilot project for tax returns in 2000

The Honourable Herb Dhaliwal, Minister of National Revenue and M.P. (Vancouver South-Burnaby), today announced that next year a pilot project will allow approximately 3.5 million Canadians to file their 1999 tax returns via the Internet.

"I am pleased to tell Canadians that next year a national pilot project will be implemented to allow selected individuals to file their next tax return using the Internet. I know Canadians have been asking for this option in recent years. Revenue Canada is now in a position to offer Internet filing because security concerns have been addressed," Mr. Dhaliwal said.

Next year, those eligible for participation will receive an invitation and a unique identifier that will allow them to use this new filing option. The pilot Internet filing project will be open to those who used commercial software to prepare their own 1998 tax return and then filed a computer-generated paper return. The use of commercially available tax preparation software approved by Revenue Canada will be mandatory.

"We want to make filing as convenient as possible for Canadians," said the Minister. "In the last few years we have implemented a variety of methods giving Canadians the most modern options for filing their tax returns."

Internet filing is the third and newest electronic filing option offered to individuals by Revenue Canada. The first, EFILE is an automated system that allows individuals to file their tax return using the services of a third party, called an electronic filer. The electronic filer prepares tax returns using special tax software, and then transmits the income tax information, through secure communication lines, to Revenue Canada.

The second option introduced was TELEFILE, an automated system that allows Revenue Canada to accept income tax returns over the telephone.

"In the last year, we have seen another significant increase of the use of these electronic filing options by Canadians," Mr. Dhaliwal said.

The Minister noted the positive response that Canadians have shown to electronic options that improve efficiency and respond to client demands.

- The number of EFILE tax returns received increased by more than 284,000 over 1998 to 5.3 million — an increase of more than 5.6%.
- The number of TELEFILE tax returns received increased by more than 169,000 over 1998 to 548,521 — an increase of more than 44.7%.
- On average, it took the Department slightly less than 2 weeks to process an electronic return.
- Revenue Canada continues to process returns filed on paper within a 4 to 6 week period.

Technical Notes: A number of provisions of the Act allow a taxpayer to carry back amounts from one taxation year to reduce the taxpayer's income, taxable income or tax for a prior year. Where an amount is carried back under one of these provisions, subsection 152(6) of the Act directs the Minister of National Revenue to reassess the taxpayer's tax for any relevant year or years to take the carry-back into account.

Subsection 152(6) is amended to include in its list of carry-back provisions new section 119 and [see (f.1) and (f.2) below — ed.] new subsections 126(2.21) and (2.22) and 128.1(7). These additions apply to taxation years that end after October 1, 1996. As well, a taxpayer who wishes to use the newly-added provisions will be deemed to have filed the prescribed form required under subsection 152(6) in a timely manner if the form is filed on or before the later of the normal deadline for filing and the day that is six months after Royal Assent to these proposals.

(c) an adjustment under subsec. 128.1(7) in respect of a taxpayer having become resident in Canada, the taxpayer is deemed to have filed a prescribed form described in subsec. 152(6) in a timely manner if the taxpayer files the form with the Minister on or before the later of the day on or before which the taxpayer would, but for this subsection, be required to file the form and the day that is six months after the day on which this Act is assented to.

by filing with the Minister, on or before the day on or before which the taxpayer is, or would be if a tax under this Part were payable by the taxpayer for that subsequent taxation year, required by section 150 to file a return of income for that subsequent taxation year, a prescribed form amending the return, the Minister shall reassess the taxpayer's tax for any relevant taxation year (other than a taxation year preceding the particular taxation year) in order to take into account the deduction claimed.

Proposed Amendment — Authorized foreign bank

Notice of Ways and Means Motion (authorized foreign banks), February 11, 1999: (11) That an authorized foreign bank that is subject to the restrictions and requirements referred to in subsection 524(2) of the Bank Act not be permitted to accept remittances made to the account of the Receiver General under section 153 of the Act.

Department of Finance news release, February 11, 1999: Remittance of Withholding Amounts

Taxpayers may pay taxes owing under the Income Tax Act in respect of most types of income by making a remittance to the account of the Receiver General at a bank or other financial institution. This service is permitted to facilitate the payment of income taxes.

It is proposed that the Canadian branch of a foreign bank be permitted to accept tax payments on behalf of the Receiver General of Canada in the same manner as Canadian resident banks unless the foreign bank is subject to the restrictions and requirements (relating primarily to deposit-taking) referred to in subsection 524(2) of the Bank Act.

I.T. Technical News: No. 4 (section 160 — the Davis case).

(1.1) Joint liability where s. 69(11) applies — Where a particular person or partnership is deemed by subsection 69(11) to have disposed of a property at any time, the person referred to in that subsection to whom a benefit described in that subsection was available in respect of a subsequent disposition of the property or property substituted for the property is jointly and severally liable with each other taxpayer to pay a part of the other taxpayer's liabilities under this Act in respect of each taxation year equal to the amount determined by the formula

A is the total of amounts payable under this Act by the other taxpayer in respect of the year, and

B is the amount that would, if the particular person or partnership were not deemed by subsection 69(11) to have disposed of the property, be determined for A in respect of the other taxpayer in respect of the year, but nothing under this subsection is deemed to limit the liability of the other taxpayer under any other provision of this Act.

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 160(1.1) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 186(1), applicable in respect of dispositions that are deemed by subsec. 69(11) to occur after April 26, 1995.

Proposed Addition — 160(1.2)

(1.2) Fair market value of undivided interest — For the purposes of this section and section 160.4, the fair market value at any time of an undivided interest in a property, expressed as a proportionate interest in that property, is, subject to subsection (4), deemed to be equal to the same proportion of the fair market value of that property at that time.

Application: Bill C-88 (First Reading June 11, 1999), s. 128, will add subsec. 160(1.2), applicable to transfers of property made after June 4, 1999.

Technical Notes: Section 160 of the Income Tax Act provides rules under which a transferee of property may be liable for unpaid taxes of the transferor when the two parties are not dealing at arm's length. In general, this liability is limited to the amount by which the fair market value of the property (at the time it is transferred) exceeds the consideration, if any, given for the property. New subsection 160(1.2) provides a rule for determining the fair market value of a proportionate undivided interest in property for the purposes of applying section 160.

Under new subsection 160(1.2), the fair market value of each proportionate undivided interest in a property is deemed to be equal to that same proportion of the fair market value of the whole of the property. For example, if a husband and wife each have a 50% undivided interest in real property, the fair market value of each of their interests is deemed to be equal to 50% of the fair market value of the real property. This rule is subject to the special rule in subsection 160(4) that deems the value of the interest to be nil when it is transferred pursuant to a decree, order or judgment of a tribunal on a marriage breakdown.

Clause 86 adds a parallel provision to the Excise Tax Act as new subsection 325(1.1).

This amendment applies to transfers of property made after June 4, 1999.

(2) Assessment — The Minister may at any time assess a taxpayer in respect of any amount payable because of this section and the provisions of this Division apply, with any modifications that the circumstances require, in respect of an assessment made under this section as though it had been made under section 152.

Related Provisions: 152 — Assessment.

History: Subsec. 160(2) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 186(2), in force on June 18, 1998. Subsec. 160(2) formerly read:

> (2) Minister may assess transferee — The Minister may at any time assess a transferee in respect of any amount payable by virtue of this section and the provisions of this Division are applicable, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of an assessment made under this section as though it had been made under section 152.

(3) Discharge of liability — Where a particular taxpayer has become jointly and severally liable with another taxpayer under this section in respect of part or all of a liability under this Act of the other taxpayer,

(a) a payment by the particular taxpayer on account of that taxpayer's liability shall to the extent of the payment discharge the joint liability; but

(b) a payment by the other taxpayer on account of that taxpayer's liability discharges the particular taxpayer's liability only to the extent that the payment operates to reduce that other taxpayer's liability to an amount less than the amount in respect of which the particular taxpayer is, by this section, made jointly and severally liable.

History: Subsec. 160(3) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 186(2), in force on June 18, 1998. Subsec. 160(3) formerly read:

> (3) Rules applicable — Where a transferor and transferee have, by virtue of subsection (1), become jointly and severally liable in respect of part or all of a liability of the transferor under this Act, the following rules apply:

> (b) a payment by the transferor on account of the transferor's liability only discharges the transferee's liability to the extent that the payment operates to reduce the transferor's liability to an amount less than the amount in respect of which the transferee was, by subsection (1), made jointly and severally liable.

(4) Special rules re transfer of property to spouse — Notwithstanding subsection (1), where at any time a taxpayer has transferred property to the taxpayer's spouse pursuant to a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal or pursuant to a written separation agreement and, at that time, the taxpayer and the spouse were separated and living apart as a result of the breakdown of their marriage, the following rules apply:

(a) in respect of property so transferred after February 15, 1984,

(i) the spouse shall not be liable under subsection (1) to pay any amount with respect to any income from, or gain from the disposition of, the property so transferred or property substituted therefor, and

(ii) for the purposes of paragraph (1)(e), the fair market value of the property at the time it was transferred shall be deemed to be nil, and

(b) in respect of property so transferred before February 16, 1984, where the spouse would, but for this paragraph, be liable to pay an amount under this Act by virtue of subsection (1), the spouse's liability in respect of that amount shall be deemed to have been discharged on February 16, 1984, but nothing in this subsection shall operate to reduce the taxpayer's liability under any other provision of this Act.

Proposed Amendment — Offsetting of Interest for Different Years

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 16, 1999: Offsetting of interest on corporate tax overpayments and underpayments

(17) That a mechanism be introduced to allow for an offset in respect of refund interest on overpayments of income tax and interest owing on unpaid income tax in accordance with proposals described in the budget documents tabled by the Minister of Finance in the House of Commons on February 16, 1999.

Federal budget, supplementary information, February 16, 1999: Offsetting of interest on corporate tax overpayments and underpayments

A taxpayer who has made an overpayment of income tax in respect of a taxation year may be entitled to receive refund interest from the government on the overpayment. Refund interest is included in income for tax purposes, in the same manner as interest from other sources.

If, on the other hand, a taxpayer has failed to pay an amount of income tax when due, the taxpayer is required to pay arrears interest to the government. Arrears interest is not deductible in computing the taxpayer's income from business or property because it is not an expense incurred for the purpose of earning income. Also, arrears interest is charged at a rate two percentage points higher than refund interest, adding a further incentive to pay tax on time and discouraging use of tax payment deferrals as a source of operating funds.

The taxation of refund interest and the non-deductibility of arrears interest can produce inappropriate results to the extent that a taxpayer owes interest on unpaid tax from one taxation year and is concurrently owed interest on a tax overpayment of an equal amount from a different taxation year. In this circumstance, the cost of the non-deductible interest payable by the taxpayer exceeds the after-tax value of the taxable interest receivable by the taxpayer. In most instances, this difference results chiefly from the non-deductibility of interest paid and the inclusion in income of interest received. The difference in the rates of interest exacerbates the discrepancy.

This situation is most commonly encountered by corporations with complex tax returns, where multiple taxation years may be reassessed at the same time and items of income and expense may be reallocated from one taxation year to another.

The budget proposes a relieving mechanism. For any period of time for which interest is calculated both on an amount owed by a corporation in respect of an underpayment of income tax and on an amount owed by Revenue Canada to the corporation in respect of an overpayment of income tax, the corporation may request that the two amounts be offset for interest calculation purposes. Eligible amounts include tax (other than instalments), interest accrued prior to the period of overlapping balances, and penalties. Interest will only be payable on the net balance owing, with the rate of interest depending on whether there is a net overpayment or underpayment.

The offset will be achieved by reallocating the refund amount (as of the time from which refund interest was calculated) as if it were a payment against the arrears amount. If the refund has already been paid, the reallocation will be conditional on repayment by the taxpayer of the refund and refund interest received. Arrears interest will be charged for the period of time that the corporation had the use of these funds.

The taxpayer will be required to apply in writing for an interest offset between any two taxation years within 90 days of the date of the notice of assessment that sets out one of the two tax amounts (refund or arrears) sought to be offset. If the taxpayer has filed an objection or appeal, the deadline will be extended to the date 90 days after the date of the notice of confirmation or 30 days after the date of the final court decision, as the case may be. The request for offsetting must specify the amounts, dates and taxation years of the reallocation requested. If a reallocation results in the creation of a new refund, the corporation will not be entitled to have the new refund reallocated under this rule unless that request is contained in the request for the original reallocation.

This income tax provision will be available to corporations for any period or part thereof that is after 1999 in respect of which refund interest and arrears interest are calculated concurrently, regardless of the taxation year to which the amounts relate.

Proposed Amendment — Penalties for Tax Advisors and Promoters

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 16, 1999: Civil penalties for misrepresentations of tax matters by third parties

(12) That, after Royal Assent to any enactment giving effect to this paragraph, a person (including a partnership)

(a) who

(i) plans, promotes or sells an arrangement that the person knows or, but for circumstances amounting to gross negligence, would have known includes a false statement or omission that may be used for tax purposes, or

(ii) makes (or participates in the making of) a statement or omission that the person knows or, but for circumstances amounting to gross negligence, would have known is a false statement or omission that may be used for tax purposes, pay a penalty equal to the greater of $1,000 and 100 per cent of the gross revenue derived, or to be derived, by the person from the activity, or

(b) who makes (or participates in the making of) a statement or omission that the person knows or, but for circumstances amounting to gross negligence, would have known is a false statement or omission that may be used for tax purposes by or on behalf of a taxpayer in a return, form, certificate, statement, or answer filed or made by or on behalf of the taxpayer, pay a penalty equal to the greater of $1,000 and 50 per cent of the amount of the tax sought to be avoided or refunded to the taxpayer, and for the purposes of this paragraph,

(c) a person who is liable to a penalty under both subparagraphs (a) and (b) in respect of the same false statement or omission, pay only a penalty equal to the greater of those penalties, and

(d) a statement made by a person as to the value of a property or a service be deemed to be a statement that the person knows or, but for circumstances amounting to gross negligence, would have known is false where the value so stated is less than a prescribed percentage or more than a prescribed percentage of the fair market value of the property or service unless the person establishes that the valuation was reasonable in the circumstances and made in good faith.

Federal budget, supplementary information, February 16, 1999: Civil penalties for misrepresentations of tax matters by third parties

Canadian tax law includes both criminal and civil penalties that may apply to misrepresentations of tax matters to ensure that all taxpayers pay their fair share of taxes.

Criminal penalties may apply where a person participates in tax evasion in respect of their or another person's taxes. Civil penalties may apply where taxpayers are shown to have knowingly, or in circumstances amounting to gross negligence, made false statements or omissions in the filing of the taxpayer's own tax information. However, Canadian tax law does not provide clear rules for assessing civil penalties for making or counselling false statements in respect of another taxpayer's tax liability. Noting this, the Auditor General, the House of Commons Standing Committee on Public Accounts and the Technical Committee on Business Taxation have made separate but similar recommendations that the tax law be revised to provide civil penalties against those who knowingly, or in circumstances amounting to gross negligence, make false statements or omissions in respect of another person's tax matters.

The budget proposes to apply civil penalties to third parties that make false statements or omissions in relation to tax matters. In particular, two new penalties are proposed.

Tax shelter and other tax planning arrangements

This penalty will apply to a person who plans, promotes or sells an arrangement that the person knows or would have known, but for circumstances amounting to gross negligence, includes a false statement or omission that may be used for tax purposes. This penalty also will apply to a person who provides false information for use in an arrangement. The penalty will be the greater of $1,000 and 100 per cent of the gross revenue derived by the person in respect of the arrangement.

Example

- Promoter X approaches individual taxpayers with an arrangement that involves each taxpayer acquiring one piece of art for its fair market value of $100. There are 1,000 pieces of art and Valuator Z has agreed to appraise the art at $1,000 per piece as part of the arrangement.
- Concurrently, Promoter X solicits Charity Y, which agrees to accept the art from the 1,000 taxpayers, as charitable donations. Charity Y also agrees to issue each taxpayer a charitable donation receipt in the amount of $1,000 per piece of art. Charity Y immediately auctions off the art to the highest bidder, and the price paid reflects the $100 value per piece. Charity Y and Promoter X split the auction proceeds.
- Each taxpayer claims a charitable donation of $1,000 on their tax return, which generates a tax reduction of $500 each (assume $1,000 x .50 top marginal tax rate). As each taxpayer paid only $100 for his or her art, each taxpayer receives a net benefit of $400.
- Application of Proposed Penalty: Promoter X is liable for the penalty because it organized an arrangement that it knew included a false statement (e.g., about the value of the art and about the allowability of a $1,000 charitable donation amount). Valuator Z is liable for the penalty for furnishing false valuations in respect of the arrangement. If Charity Y knew or would have known, but for circumstances amounting to gross negligence, that the valuations were incorrect, it would be liable for the penalty for issuing false receipts. As well, registration of Charity Y as a charity may be subject to revocation in such circumstances.

Advising or participating in a false filing

This penalty will apply to a person who makes (or participates in the making of) a statement or omission that the person knows or would have known, but for circumstances amounting to gross negligence, is a false statement or omission that may be used for tax purposes by or on behalf of another person in a return, form, certificate, statement or answer filed or made by or on behalf of that other person. In such circumstances, the penalty will be the greater of $1,000 and 50 per cent of the amount of tax sought to be avoided or refunded.

Example

- Accountant X receives a box of personal and business receipts from Client Y and agrees to prepare a business expense statement for Y. Accountant X includes the $5,000 cost of Y's family vacation, which X knew to be a non-deductible personal expense, as a business expense in Y's tax return.
- Accountant X finalizes Y's tax return and advises that Y will be receiving a $2,000 tax refund. The tax return is filed by Y.
- Revenue Canada conducts a compliance audit and discovers the $5,000 of personal expenses deducted in Y's tax return.
- Application of Proposed Penalty: Accountant X is liable because he or she knew of the false statement included in Y's tax return. On the facts, Accountant X may also be subject to criminal prosecution.

Revenue Canada would have the burden of proof of establishing the facts necessary to apply these civil penalties. Consultations will be held on the merits of requiring a person, who has been shown by Revenue Canada to have made a valuation of property that deviates significantly from the property's fair market value, to establish that the representation was reasonable in the circumstances and made in good faith.

It is proposed that these penalty provisions be added for the purposes of the Income Tax Act and the Goods and Services Tax/Harmonized Sales Tax and apply after Royal Assent.

Federal budget, supplementary information, February 16, 1999: Eliminating the 3-per-cent surtax for all taxpayers

The general (3-per-cent) surtax was introduced in the 1986 budget. All taxpayers were liable for the surtax. The 1998 budget eliminated this surtax for those with incomes under $50,000 and reduced it for those in the $50,000 to $65,000 income range. This budget eliminates the 3-per-cent surtax completely, effective July 1, 1999. For 1999, a taxpayer will benefit from a surtax reduction by an amount equal to one and one-half per cent of federal tax plus one-half of the surtax reduction for which he or she was eligible as proposed in the 1998 budget.

Proposed Addition — 180.1(1.4)

(1.4) Former resident — credit for tax paid — There may be deducted from the tax otherwise payable under this Part by an individual for a taxation year (computed without reference to subsections (1.1) and (1.2)) the amount, if any, by which

(a) the amount that would be deductible under section 119 in computing the individual's tax payable under Part I for the year if, in applying for that purpose paragraph (a) of the definition "tax for the year otherwise payable under this Part" in subsection 126(7), the reference in that paragraph to "tax payable under this Part for the year" were read as a reference to "the total of taxes payable under this Part and Part I.1 for the year but for subsections 180.1(1.1), (1.2) and (1.4)"

exceeds

(b) the amount deductible under section 119 in computing the individual's tax payable under Part I for the year.

Application: The December 23, 1998 draft legislation (taxpayer migration), subsec. 26(1), will add subsec. 180.1(1.4), applicable after October 1, 1996.

Technical Notes: Section 180.1 of the Act imposes a surtax on individuals at a rate of 3% of the tax payable under Part I of the Act. An additional 5% surtax is imposed on that portion of an individual's Part I tax in excess of $12,500.

New subsection 40(3.7) of the Act provides a "stop-loss" rule that may apply to reduce the loss of an individual from the disposition of property at a particular time, where the individual was non-resident at any time before the particular time and received dividends in respect of the property while non-resident. New section 119 of the Act provides a special tax credit in certain cases where subsection 40(3.7) applies to an individual who ceased to be resident in Canada. If an individual's Part I tax for the year that includes the emigration is less than the amount deductible under section 119, new subsection 180.1(1.4) of the Act provides that the individual may deduct the balance from the tax otherwise payable under Part I.1 for that year.

(2) Meaning of tax payable under Part I — For the purposes of subsection (1), the tax payable under Part I by an individual for a taxation year is the amount, if any, by which

(a) where section 119 is applicable in computing the individual's tax payable for the year, the amount that would be the individual's average tax for the year of averaging, as determined under paragraph 119(1)(d), if the expression "deductible under subsection 127(5)" in that paragraph were read as "added under subsection 120(1) or deductible under sections 122.3, 126, 127 and 127.2 to 127.4", and

(b) in any other case, the amount that would be the individual's tax payable under that Part for the year if that Part were read without reference to subsection 120(1) and sections 122.3, 126, 127, 127.2 to 127.4 and 127.54

(c) where the individual was throughout the year a mutual fund trust, the least of the amounts determined under paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of the description of A in the definition "refundable capital gains tax on hand" in subsection 132(4) in respect of the trust for the year, and

(d) in any other case, nil.

Proposed Amendment — 180.1(2)

(2) Meaning of tax payable under Part I — For the purposes of subsection (1), the tax payable under Part I by an individual for a taxation year is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the amount that would be the individual's tax payable under that Part for the year if that Part were read without reference to section 119, subsection 120(1) and sections 122.3, 126, 127, 127.4 and 127.54

exceeds

(b) if the individual was throughout the year a mutual fund trust, the least of the amounts determined under paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of the description of A in the definition "refundable capital gains tax on hand" in subsection 132(4) in respect of the trust for the year, and

(c) in any other case, nil.

Application: The December 23, 1998 draft legislation (taxpayer migration), subsec. 26(2), will amend subsec. 180.1(2) to read as above, applicable after October 1, 1996.

Technical Notes: Subsection 180.1(2) of the Act provides rules for calculating Part I tax for the purposes of determining the base for tax under Part I.1 of the Act ("surtax"). Essentially, the tax base for surtax is the individual's tax payable for the year under Part I of the Act, calculated without reference to certain amounts. Paragraphs 180.1(2)(a) and (b) are amended to add to the list of those amounts an amount deductible under new section 119 of the Act in respect of a former resident of Canada.

(3) Return — Every individual liable to pay tax under this Part for a taxation year shall, on or before the day on or before which the individual is required by section 150 to file a return of income for the year under Part I, or would be so required if the individual were liable to pay tax under Part I for the year,

(a) file with the Minister, without notice or demand therefor, a return for the year under this Part in prescribed form and containing prescribed information; and

(b) pay the tax under this Part for the year for which the individual is liable.

(b) in any other case, the amount that would be his tax payable under that Part for the year if that Part were read without reference to subsections 120(1) and (3.1) and sections 122.3, 126, 127 and 127.2 to 127.4.

Proposed Addition — Income-Splitting Tax on Children

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 16, 1999: Income-splitting tax

(4) That, for the 2000 and subsequent taxation years, an individual under 18 years of age at the end of a calendar year be required to add to tax otherwise payable under Part I of the Act an income tax computed at the top marginal rate of tax applicable under that Part for the year on

(a) taxable dividends received directly or through a trust or partnership in respect of shares of a corporation (other than shares of a class that are listed on a prescribed Canadian or foreign stock exchange),

(b) amounts that are included in the individual's income because of section 15 of the Act as a consequence of the ownership by any person of shares described in subparagraph (a), and

(c) income from a partnership or trust if the income is derived by the partnership or trust from the provision of goods or services to a business

(i) carried on by a person related to the individual,

(ii) carried on by a corporation of which a person related to the individual is a specified shareholder, or

(iii) carried on by a professional corporation of which a person related to the individual is a shareholder.

(5) That income subject to the special tax described in paragraph (4) be deductible in computing the individual's taxable income and that the only deductions permitted in calculating income, taxable income or tax payable for the purposes of the special tax be the dividend tax credit and the foreign tax credit.

(6) That a parent of an individual liable for tax under paragraph (4) be jointly and severally liable for that tax if the parent was active in the business from which the income that is subject to that tax was derived.

(7) That paragraphs (4) to (6) not apply to

(a) individuals who have no parent who is resident in Canada at any time in the year,

(b) income from property inherited by an individual from a parent of the individual, and

(c) income from property inherited by an individual if, during the year in which the individual receives the income, the individual is

(i) in full-time attendance at a post-secondary educational institution, or

(ii) an individual in respect of whom the disability tax credit may be claimed.

Federal budget, supplementary information, February 16, 1999: Income splitting with minor children

Progressivity of tax rates is one of the principles of the Canadian personal income tax system. High-income individuals are considered to be better able to bear a higher rate of income taxation than are lower-income individuals. This progressivity is reflected in the three different federal marginal tax rates of 17 per cent, 26 per cent and 29 per cent, which apply depending on income levels. Further, with the implementation of the changes announced in this budget, the basic personal tax credit will allow the first $7,131 of an individual's income to be earned tax-free. Income-splitting tax planning techniques seek to avoid the rules which embody the principle of progressivity by causing income earned by high- income individuals to be taxed in the hands of low-income individuals (generally the family members of the high-income earner). The tax benefits of income splitting can generally only be accomplished by high-income individuals with dependants.

Currently, the income tax system uses attribution rules to reduce the opportunities for income splitting. These rules apply in certain cases to attribute to a taxpayer income from property that has been provided directly, or indirectly (for example, through a trust or corporation), to an individual by the taxpayer. Generally these rules apply in the family context. However, several tax planning techniques have developed over time to avoid the application of the attribution rules or to take undue advantage of exceptions provided in those rules. In addition, recent case law has provided support for income-splitting techniques contrary to policy intent.

In order to improve the fairness and integrity of the Canadian tax system, this budget proposes a targeted measure to discourage income splitting with minor children. The new measure constitutes a special tax, at the top marginal tax rate instead of the normal graduated rates, to be imposed on certain income of individuals age 17 or under. The types of income which will be taxed under this new measure are:

- taxable dividends and other shareholder benefits on unlisted shares of Canadian and foreign companies (received directly or through a trust or partnership); and
- income from a partnership or trust where the income is derived by the partnership or trust from the business of providing goods or services to a business carried on by a relative of the child or in which the relative participates.

Income that is subject to this tax will not be eligible for any deductions or credits other than the dividend tax credit and foreign tax credit. An offsetting deduction in computing taxable income will be introduced to ensure that income that is subject to the new tax is not also subject to ordinary income tax. In addition, income that is taxed under this new measure will not be subject to the attribution rules.

Income that is not received as dividend income, partnership income or trust income is not subject to the new measure. Accordingly, income from employment or personal services of the minor will not be subject to this measure. Dividends received on any listed shares will not be subject to these rules, since the income flow is less susceptible to manipulation. Further, income from property acquired on the death of a parent of the individual will be exempt from the measure, as will income from any property inherited by individuals with disabilities who are eligible to claim the disability tax credit or by individuals who are in full time attendance at a post-secondary institution. Individuals who have no parent resident in Canada for tax purposes in the year will also be exempted from the application of the new tax.

The scope of this new measure is narrow; it targets those structures that are primarily put in place to facilitate income splitting with minors. The government will monitor the effectiveness of this targeted measure, and may take appropriate action if new income-splitting techniques develop.

This proposal will apply to the 2000 and subsequent taxation years. This delay in the application of the new measure will allow time for consultation with taxpayers regarding the details of its implementation.

Proposed Amendment — Authorized foreign bank

Notice of Ways and Means Motion (authorized foreign banks), February 11, 1999: (5) That, for the purposes of Part I.3 and Part VI of the Act, the capital of an authorized foreign bank be an amount equal to 10% of the bank's risk-weighted assets as determined under prescribed rules based on the risk-weighted asset guidelines of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions.

Department of Finance news release, February 11, 1999: Capital Tax

Banks are subject to capital tax under Part I.3 and Part VI of the Income Tax Act. While the definitions of "capital" for regulatory and tax purposes differ slightly, the components of a Canadian bank's regulatory capital are generally subject to capital tax. Thus, the regulatory capital requirements applicable to Canadian banks guarantee that those entities have a minimum amount of taxable capital employed in Canada.

Because foreign banks having branches in Canada will be subject to the capital adequacy requirements imposed by the banks' home countries, the branches themselves will not be required to comply with Canadian capital requirements applicable to Canadian banks. Given that Canadian capital taxes are based to a large extent on the capital requirements imposed by Canadian regulators, a foreign branch could pay substantially less capital tax than its domestic competitors.

A new capital tax base is proposed to apply to foreign banks. For tax purposes, the capital of a foreign bank that has a Canadian branch will equal 10% of the "risk-weighted assets" of the Canadian branch, which will be defined, for these purposes, with regard to the risk-weighted asset requirements currently used by the Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions.

[For other proposals see under 248(1)"authorized foreign bank" — ed.]

(2) Where dividend received by trader or dealer in securities — Where a trader or dealer in securities (other than a corporation) has at any time in a taxation year and after 1971 received a taxable dividend from a corporation resident in Canada that would, if the trader or dealer had been a corporation, have been controlled by the trader or dealer, the trader or dealer shall, on or before the day on or before which he is required to file his return of income under Part I for the year, pay a tax under this Part of 25% on the portion of the dividend that was paid out of the designated surplus of the corporation.

(3) Where amalgamation of 2 or more corporations — For the purposes of this Part, where at any time in a taxation year and after 1971 there has been an amalgamation of 2 or more corporations at a time when one or more of the corporations (in this subsection referred to as a "controlled corporation") were controlled by another or others of those corporations (in this subsection referred to as a "controlling corporation"),

(a) each controlling corporation shall be deemed to have received a taxable dividend immediately before the amalgamation from each corporation controlled by it at that time,

(b) each such taxable dividend so received from a controlled corporation shall be deemed to have been paid out of the controlled corporation's designated surplus immediately before the amalgamation, and

(c) the amount of any such dividend so received by a controlling corporation from a corporation controlled by it shall be deemed to be the greater of

(i) the amount that would have been payable to it on the winding-up of the controlled corporation immediately before the amalgamation if the subscribed capital had been repaid and what remained to be distributed on the winding-up were an amount equal to the designated surplus of the controlled corporation immediately before the amalgamation, and

(ii) the amount that would have been received by it as dividends on its shares of the capital stock of the controlled corporation immediately before the amalgamation, if at that time

(A) the maximum amount available for dividends were an amount equal to the designated surplus of the controlled corporation immediately before the amalgamation, and

(B) the controlled corporation had distributed that amount by way of dividends to its shareholders, in accordance with their respective rights to receive dividends.

(4) Where corporation controlled — For the purpose of this section, one corporation is controlled by another corporation if more than 50% of its issued share capital (having full voting rights under all circumstances) belongs to the other corporation, to persons with whom the other corporation does not deal at arm's length, or to the other corporation and persons with whom the other corporation does not deal at arm's length.

(5) When dividend paid out of designated surplus — For the purpose of this section,

(a) where the amount of a corporation's earnings for a control period that was available for payment of dividends was, at the time a particular taxable dividend was paid, equal to or greater than the particular dividend plus all other taxable dividends paid by the payer corporation at the same time as the particular dividend, no part of the particular dividend shall be regarded as having been paid out of designated surplus; and

(b) in any other case, the portion of the particular dividend that shall be deemed to have been paid out of designated surplus is that proportion of the lesser of

(i) the aggregate of the particular dividend and all other taxable dividends paid by the payer corporation at the same time as the particular dividend, minus the amount, if any, of the payer corporation's earnings for the control period that was available for payment of dividends at that time, and that the particular dividend is of the aggregate of the particular dividend and all other dividends paid by the payer corporation at the same time as the particular dividend.

(ii) the designated surplus of the payer corporation immediately before that time,

(6) Where dividends paid at same time on more than one class of shares — For the purpose of subsection (5), where a corporation has, at the same time, paid dividends on its issued shares of different classes and one of the classes of shares had full voting rights under all circumstances and another had not, the dividends on the shares of the class that had full voting rights under all circumstances shall be deemed to have been paid immediately after the dividends on the other shares.

(7) Idem — For the purpose of subsection (5), dividends paid on the same day shall, subject to subsection (6), be deemed to have been paid at the same time.

(8) Meaning of "control period" — In this section "control period" means the period from the commencement of the payer corporation's taxation year in which the control was acquired to the end of the taxation year in which the dividend was paid.

right under a scientific research and experimental development financing contract does not designate an amount under subsection (4) in respect of the share, debt obligation or right on or before the day on or before which the designation was required by that subsection, the corporation shall be deemed to have made the designation on that day if

(a) the corporation has filed with the Minister a prescribed information return relating to the scientific research and experimental development tax credit in respect of the share, debt obligation or right within the time that it would have been so required to file the return had the designation been filed on that day, and

(i) designated an amount in respect of the share, debt obligation or right by filing a prescribed form with the Minister, and

(ii) paid to the Receiver General, at the time the prescribed form referred to in subparagraph (i) is filed, an amount that is a reasonable estimate of the penalty payable by the corporation for the late designation in respect of the share, debt obligation or right,

(a) a non-resident corporation or a non-resident-owned investment corporation, or the whole or any part of which dividend would, if Part VII were applicable, be regarded as having been paid out of designated surplus of the corporation as determined under that Part, the corporation shall, on or before the day on or before which it is required to file a return of income under Part I for the taxation year in which the dividend was paid, pay a tax under this Part equal to

(c) in any case where paragraph (a) applies, 15%, and

(6) Exception where shares acquired by gift or bequest — No tax is payable under this Part where the payer corporation was, at the time a particular dividend was paid by it, controlled by a person exempt from tax under section 149, if all of the issued share capital of the corporation (having full voting rights under all circumstances) that, during the period defined in subsection 192(8) as the "control period", belonged to that person, to persons with whom that person did not deal at arm's length, or to that person and persons with whom that person did not deal at arm's length, were acquired by that person or those persons by way of unconditional gift or unconditional bequest.
